People know it’s not healthy, but is easy, quick and cheap

“I know healthy food is the best and it's good, but fast food is fast.”
Boy, 14 years old

"McDonald’s is quick, easy and convenient. It's not about food, we just want somewhere we can eat quickly and go to see a movie with our kids."
Parents

People want to buy food that is quick and convenient.
For some teenagers their motivation to eat healthy is based upon physical appearance.

“I don’t eat those chips, I’m trying to lose weight so I go to the gym and play football everyday. I’m also trying to eat healthy.”

People cook healthy meals at home but eating outside is a treat

Parents think they can’t control what their children eat when they are out and some children become resentful towards their parents if they say no to their children.

"I eat fish, vegetables and fruits at home. I ask my mum for these because they are healthy foods, but when I'm out I like to eat chicken and chips, I just like eating it!"

Girl, 7 years old

"When we eat out, it's a treat for us and kids. It's a special occasion, we let our kids to eat whatever they want. But we cook healthy meals at home."

Mum
It’s a social thing

Take away chicken shops are full with kids and parents after school ends. Local teenagers hang out in front of chicken shops everyday after school.

"All my friends go to Taste More, everyone. We hang out there! I don't really want to eat chicken and chips but friends go so I end up going"

Boy, 14 years old

“Kids end up going to chicken shops because there is no place to hang-out.”

Local resident
Children like choice and variety when they eat out.

Parents think children's menus are often too simple when they eat out and wish there was more variety.

"It will be good if we have more flexible menus. Give an option in a children's menu, for example, you can choose the sweet corn option instead of chips."

Mum
Young people think healthy food is not tasty

Healthy food doesn’t seem to be attractive for them and young people like the taste of fried chicken and chips.

“I don’t spend my money on vegetables!”

Girl, 15 years old
People don’t really know what’s healthier

Some people seem to have more understanding of what’s healthier and how to cook differently to make their meals healthier.

“Custard is actually not that bad, it's better than other pastries. People don't really know this.”

Mum

“Schools educate about healthy food nowadays. My son recently went to a trip to Tesco with his peers guided by his teacher. He asks about sugar when we eat now!”

Mum
Businesses think that the children don’t care about healthy

Some businesses have a grilled chicken menu which is healthier, but children don’t really order it.

“There was a healthy breakfast club that somebody set up at the primary school. They offered free healthy breakfast to students, but the kids didn’t eat it. They like the rich bread and pastries like the traditional Portuguese breakfast. The organiser was so shocked that it didn’t work.”

Shop owner

“I hide the sauce and the kids ask for it. Look at how much sauce they put in their chips. You can't not give it to them.”

Many food shops are embedded in the local community as places where local people come to socialise as well as eat.

“What local businesses said...

“The café is like a community place, people come to hang-out. It’s a very community focused area.”
Cafe manager

“A lot of Brazilian people come here, it's their home”
Cafe owner
Businesses value their relationship with their regular customers and want to keep customers happy.

"95% of our customers are happy and they come back. I always talk to them with a smile and get to know them personally."

Restaurant owner

"The Three Lions Cafe's food is very nice and very friendly staff. It's important that the staff is nice, then we go back there."

Customer
It’s not just about healthy, it’s about giving options

Some businesses have flexible menu options for children.

“Brazilian people love food and a wide variety of choice is very important for me when it comes to food.”

Restaurant owner

“We have an option to make the portion size small for kids so they can choose any food they like from the menu.”

Restaurant staff
Businesses think children like to eat what’s familiar to them.

“New customers always ask the differences between those two, but kids always go for the traditional version which is fried and filled with lots of cheese.”
Staff member of shop

“We have some vegetarian options including falafel wraps... but only adults tend to buy them, kids only buy chicken and chips.”

Businesses think parents and schools need to be responsible for children’s health

“I don’t think the problem is high streets, it's parents mentality. Mentality needs to change from the parents in terms of healthy eating, parents often choose unhealthy options instead of healthy options in my shop! This is perhaps because of price, where the food is located, or they just don't think consciously.”

Shop owner
People feel the area is unsafe for children and young people

“\"The area is not safe, there are some drug addicts. I don’t really like to hang out here.\"”

Girl, 19 years old

“What people said...”

“The area is not safe. That may be a reason why people don’t come here.”

Cafe owner
There is a sense that people feel the area is neglected.

People seem to be indifferent about the high street and they don’t feel particularly connected to it. “It’s a no man’s land.”

“What people said…

“Brixton down the road is quite nice and there are more cafes in Clapham North, but this area is quite empty, there isn’t any healthy options either! Stockwell is in the middle of these nice places.”

Local resident

"The Clapham road is really old and outdated area. We don't really like it, we might go there if there are cool modern food shops like Leon or Burger King”

Boy, 15 years old
There is not enough choice in food around this area

People seem to go to takeaway chicken shops because there is no healthier choice.

"Something like a open salad bar, we need it in this area, there is no healthy shop."

“If there are more nice cafes like Jack's cafe on the main high streets, that would be great.”

Mum

“This area needs more places that you can get quick takeaway healthy meals.”

Youth club manager
People think something nice needs to happen on the high street

Regeneration is perceived as an opportunity.

“What could be quite nice is another Brixton pop up area, market, or outdoor place, where people can eat here, I’m sure more people will come to the area!”

Mum

“There is no real social space in this area. The road next to the station is recently re-fashioned and it's very nice but something can go in the area.”

Youth club manager
The high street shops need to be more visible from outside and have nice atmosphere.

"I never go to the food shops on Clapham road because they look dark from outside and I don’t really know what it will be like inside."

"It's important that those shops look bright and fresh from outside. It doesn't have to be healthy, I never look for healthy food when I’m out, the environmental factors are more important."

Mum
There is a strong sense of community in the area

“People think Stockwell is not nice, but it’s not true. The real Stockwell is a community of a lot of international people and they are really nice and friendly. A lot of portuguese people live here, they know how to help each other!”
