

London Health Board

1. Introduction

The London Health Board (LHB) is a non-statutory group chaired by the Mayor of London comprising elected leaders and key London professional health leads. It was set up in 2013 and has been refocused in light of the London Health Commission's Better Health for London report and the NHS Five Year Forward View.

The refocused LHB met for the first time in March 2015 and continues to meet quarterly. The Mayor of London chaired his first LHB meeting on 28 June 2016 and has since affirmed his commitment to the LHB, recognising its value in bringing together health and care partners with political leaders to discuss how better health, and health and care system, can be achieved for London. In December 2016, the LHB agreed to extend membership in order that mental health trusts and the acute sector are represented (see below).

2. Purpose

The LHB will drive improvements in London's health, care and health inequalities where political engagement at this level can uniquely make a difference. It will seek ways of giving additional impetus to progress the ambition to make London the healthiest global city. The LHB will make the case for investment, power and freedoms to enable the improvement of health and care services and the wider determinants of health in London. It will consider ways of supporting and accelerating the transformation of health and care services in the capital. The LHB will champion public participation in health and an increase in choice and accountability in health and care services.

LHB partners acknowledge the importance of political leadership to support health and care transformation at all spatial levels within London. The London Health Devolution Agreement and London Health and Care Collaboration Agreements in 2015 proposed the LHB as a vehicle to provide political oversight of devolution. The London Health and Care Strategic Partnership Board will seek to mirror collaborative operational oversight of health and care in London.
